Comment: Creating LNG terminals off the coast of NY is going to be harmful to the sea life that have depended on the rich natural resources offered here for thousands of years. This will be forever destroyed upon the building of a concrete island to support an LNG terminal which at its base will cover 160 acres. In addition to the destruction of the natural habitat, the building of LNG terminals will only add capacity to a fuel supply that is not experiencing shortages. Adding to the ability to ship frozen natural gas, a finite fossil fuel, from foreign countries, many that have deep seeded anti-USA sentiments, benefits those that mean to do us harm and takes away from what the focus of our nations energy plan should be, sustainability and the reduction of dependance on fossil fuels. When these fuels run out we will always have the concrete footprint they leave behind. A tragic blight on nature
